I used expo to create this react app, besides that there wasn't all that much effort that went into this if i'm being honest. I decided that because in my last project, I used classes a little too excessively in my opinion that this one would be done purely with function(s), I only ended up needing one called Utton. It took an imported image, color and text string and created a button with those attributes which would alert the user when clicked.

Two images of using ios and android emulator and one running on my phone.
